Chapter 1 by Erjsl

"Jack," I whisper. I reached out to grab him and he seemed to disappear. I screamed. "No!" I couldn't lose him again. I collapsed onto the ground and began to weep.

I woke up with a start. I looked around. Everything was the same. Including the fact that I was alone in a huge castle. Jack is gone. MIA. Anna is on honeymoon with Kristof, and get this, Sven. I've been training with my powers more often. I visit the trolls a lot. Last time I was there they said I need to be aware of the darkness that could envelop me, or all of Arendelle. They said not to tell anyone and I haven't, but how I am supposed to stop the darkness if and when it comes?

Chapter 2 by Zara Rose

I was scared, but I didn't let it show in public. Jack was the only one that could actually see through my mask of composure. I never would've thought that he would've left me. Sure, he had to visit the North Pole a few times, but that was only for a few days and then he was back. It's been over three weeks now and I haven't heard or see him since he had left. I was worried about him.

I sighed and got ready for the long day ahead of me. I grew lonely without Anna, Kristoff, Jack, or even Sven to keep me company. The halls seemed longer and darker without anyone at my side. It seemed so quiet. The male guards seemed to be hard to be seen, even the palace guards seemed to have vanished. I grew more and more scared by the second. The darkness seemed to follow me everywhere I went. I heard faint tracks.

"Well, hello there, your majesty," that voice. I knew that voice. It was the one that had haunted me ever night since Jack had left.

I slowly turned to face him. His skin was a chalky grey and his eyes were catlike. He wore a black robe and his black hair was slicked back. He smiled so that his small pointed teeth showed. He looked like count Dracula.

"Who are you?" I asked as I back away from him.

"Your new master," he said as he lunged for me suddenly and the world went black.

Chapter 3 by Zara Rose

When I woke up, I was in a dungeon-like room. A small metal cot was against the wall, a small toilet was across from the cot, and bars were on the window. I looked at my hands to see that I was still able to use them. I could freeze the wall like before. I got up quickly to look out the door and my heart plummeted. I was at least ten stories above the ground.

I groan just as I hear a key turn in the lock of the door that was behind me. I whirl around to see the grey skinned man. He was grinning like a psycho. I shuddered involuntarily.

"I see you're finally awake," he said as he looked around the room as if it was the most luxurious room ever. "Your precious Jack will be coming here soon."

"What? Why?" I asked as I stepped closer to the wall as he took a step closer to me.

"To save you of course," the grin on his face sent chills down my spine. "He will be upset once he sees what you have become though."

"What are yo...?" before I could finish my sentence he had lunged at me and had a knife in my chest.

Everything went dark once more. When I woke for the second time, I felt different.

"Feel better?" the grey skinned man asked with a smirk on his face.

"Much," I said in a voice that wasn't my own as I smiled.

"And when you see Jack?" he asked as my smile turned to a frown.

"I'll kill him," I said and in my heart I screamed no.

"We have to find her," Jack said with such conviction, that it moved his fellow guardians.

"You care for her, don't you?" Bunny asked in an unusually soft voice.

"More than anything," Jack answered as he walked towards the window.

"Then to the sleigh!" North bellowed and everyone ran towards the sleigh that was currently on the balcony.

"I knew he wouldn't take long to figure it out," Pitch said with a chuckle.

"The battle will begin soon, Master," I said as I cross my arms over my chest with a smirk.

"Then let it begin," Pitch said with a sneer of disgust. "Fire and Ice will be rivals before long. You must destroy the Ice from the world, my dear little Fire."

"Yes, Master," Elsa said with a wicked grin as she walked out of the room and towards the armory where her weapons of choice lay waiting. "Time to kill little Jack Frost."

Chapter 5 by Erjsl

Elsa lay down on the cold cement floor trying to remember what had happened in the last couple hours. She stood up and rushed to the steel bars and shook them yelling "Help! Someone! Where am I?" She focused her strength on the bars and closed her eyes. Slowly, ice formed around her hands. She shook the bars with all her strength and quickly they snapped. She ran down the hallway, to only find another door. She knelt down and looked down through the small keyhole. There she saw a horrendous sight. Sitting in a throne sat Pitch, though she couldn't see him she could tell by his voice. Who was he talking to? Elsa couldn't tell. Then she saw. A tall figure stepped to the left of Pitch's throne. It was her. Well, a version of her. Next to Pitch stood a version of Elsa, only she was in a fiery red dress, much like the dress that Elsa wore when she sang Let It Go on that mountain a few years ago. She had blood red hair that was tied in a braid. Her head turned slightly and Elsa saw her face staring back at her.

"Wh-who's she?" Elsa whispered.

Pitch smiled, turning a small dagger around and around in his hand. "She's here to help you

Elsa paused, eyeing Asle.

Pitch groaned. "She's HERE to make sure you finish killing Jack."

Elsa gulped. "Oh."
